Pitch

A hard-rock song about reinventing the scientific method — and lighting a new age with it.

Description

"The Cat's Enlightenment" is a hard-rock anthem for the day science found its rightful place under the Sun. The song's hero is a single skeptic with nothing but a spyglass and common sense, and what he starts is bigger than any one cat: a civilization remembering how to think.

Appendix A: Lyrics

Dark purple heaven - It was the Begin
Story of Glory and story of Sin
Battle of Reason against the Dark
Story how God was defeated by Cat

It was a dark time of superstitions and fakes
Only one holy book was a bunch of mistakes
No one could refute book's "Divine Truth"
But one brave Cat proposed something New

His sword was a Spyglass, his shield - Common Sense
He used observations, so it was Reason's dance
Beauty of Science found right place under Sun
That's how Cat's Enlightenment age began.

Appendix B: Epigraphs

When one person suffers from a delusion it is called insanity. When many people suffer from a delusion it is called religion.

— Richard Dawkins — British evolutionary biologist and author, The God Delusion

Stupidity is the only universal capital crime; the sentence is death... carried out automatically and without pity.

— Robert A. Heinlein — Science fiction writer, Time Enough for Love
